RE: Investigation of the shooting death of Arturo Enriquez, dob 2/28/74 (criminal record lists 3 other dates of birth), DPD # 0392481, by Officers Daniel Morehead, #05092, and Michael Walsh, #07048, on June 28, 2010, at 3190 West Alabama Place, Denver, Colorado.

Dear Chief Whitman:

The investigation and legal analysis of the shooting death of Arturo Enriquez ("Enriquez") have been completed, and I conclude that under applicable Colorado law no criminal charges are fileable against Officers Daniel Morehead ("Officer Morehead") and Michael Walsh ("Officer Walsh"). My decision, based on criminal-law standards, does not limit administrative action by the Denver Police Department where non-criminal issues can be reviewed or civil actions where less-stringent laws, rules and legal levels of proof apply. A description of the procedure used in the investigation of this officer-involved shooting and the applicable Colorado law is attached to this letter.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The voluntary sworn videotaped statements of Officer Morehead and Officer Walsh to investigators are consistent with and corroborated by the other witnesses to this incident and all of the physical evidence developed in the investigation. The totality of the evidence developed in this investigation provides a clear account of what occurred.

On June 28, 2010, at 12:48 a.m., a citizen witness called 9-1-1 to report a "man with a gun." The 9-1-1 call taker obtained initial information and Denver police officers were dispatched to the location at 12:50 a.m. The officers were advised of the location and description of the suspect. He was armed with a black handgun and was with another man. The citizen indicated the suspect was outside her apartment building located at 3190 West Louisiana Street, but she was afraid to look out the window again to see if he was still present. All of the apartments face the parking lot of the building. The call taker continued to obtain further information until concluding the call at 12:52 a.m. Officer Morehead and Officer Jason Meier, DPD # 05137, (“Officer Meier”) were the first to arrive at the scene at 12:51 a.m. Officer Walsh arrived at 12:54 a.m.

The officers contacted the citizen witness and then searched the area for the suspect. At 1:05:39 a.m., Officer Morehead advised dispatch that he was now in the 3100 block of West Alabama Place where he observed two men on the sidewalk drinking beer in front of the house at 3190. One of the men matched the description of the man with the handgun. Officer Morehead stopped his marked police car in the street and focused his spotlight on the two men.¹ Due to the nature of the call, he approached the two men with his service pistol drawn. The person matching the description, later identified as Enriquez, stood up. Officer Morehead commanded Enriquez to “sit down” and “keep your hands where I can see them.” Enriquez did not comply with Officer Morehead’s commands, but instead advanced toward him. Officer Morehead observed what he believed was the handle of a screwdriver protruding from his pocket. Despite the commands, Enriquez pulled the screwdriver from his pocket, and shortly thereafter tossed it away.² Officer Morehead delivered a quick defensive front kick to Enriquez to stop his advance and keep a separation from him. Enriquez fell backward to the sidewalk, landing on “his butt.” Officer Walsh arrived as this was occurring. He stopped his marked police car parallel to Officer Morehead’s. He immediately drew his service pistol and advanced to a position to the right of Officer Morehead and ten feet from the two men.

The officers continued to deliver verbal commands to Enriquez to show his hands, but instead Enriquez pushed his shirt aside and pulled a black handgun from the right side of his body at waist level and raised it up in the direction of the officers. The officers simultaneously fired six shots each in rapid succession. They stopped firing when Enriquez dropped the handgun from his right hand to the sidewalk after rolling backward from his seated position to his right side.³ Throughout the confrontation, the other person, later identified as Gary M. (“G.M.”), followed all commands given by the officers.

Immediately after the shooting, at 1:07:09 a.m., Officer Walsh advised the dispatcher that a person had been shot and emergency medical services (EMS) were requested. At 1:07:36 a.m., the officer-involved shooting was aired at 3190 West Alabama Place.

Enriquez was transported by ambulance to Denver Health Medical Center. He was pronounced dead by Dr. Liau at 1:35 a.m. Dr. John Carver performed the autopsy on the body of Arturo Enriquez on June 28, 2010. Dr. Carver determined Enriquez’s death was caused by multiple gunshot wounds.

2 See attached photo of screwdriver.

3 See attached photos of the location of the handgun wielded by Enriquez.

Pablo S. (“P.S.”) told investigators in pertinent part that he was assaulted at approximately 12:30 a.m. at his apartment building at 3130 West Louisiana Avenue. P.S. said he is paralyzed from the waist down and is unable to stand. Two men followed him into his apartment building to his 4th floor apartment. (Subsequent events would determine the two men were Enriquez and G.M.) P.S. was in his wheelchair unlocking his door when Enriquez and G.M. attempted to gain entry to his apartment, and he pulled his key out of the door before it opened. The men then went down the hallway, but after failing to gain entry to another apartment, Enriquez rushed back at P.S. at a fast pace. P.S. pulled his Crosman 77—semi-automatic CO₂ air pistol from under his right leg and pointed it at Enriquez.⁴ He pulled the trigger, but the handgun did not fire because the safety was on. Enriquez grabbed the handgun and hit him on the side of the face. P.S. bit Enriquez’s hand causing it to bleed. Enriquez punched him, pushed him into the wall of the hallway and threw him on the floor. Enriquez picked up the handgun, kicked him in the leg and left. As the two men left the scene, G.M. laughed and said: “That’s what you get cripple.” P.S. said the handgun looks like a real Glock which is why he carries it for protection. The projectiles are loaded into a magazine. The weapon has a moving slide which locks to the rear when the handgun is empty. It is powered by a CO₂ canister.⁵

A witness to the shooting, Larry T. (“L.T.”), who lives across the street from the scene, told investigators in pertinent part that the officers twice ordered the shot party to “Stop! ... Put your hands up!”, but the man did not comply. Instead, the man used his right hand and reached for something in his waistband area. He said it was a black object in his hand. He thought it was a handgun because of the way the man was holding the object with his hand clenched around a handle. After the shooting he saw the silhouette of the handgun on the sidewalk which looked like a .45 caliber or 9mm semiautomatic.

The person with Enriquez at the time of the shooting, Gary M. (“G.M.”), told investigators in pertinent part that Enriquez had shown him the handgun. G.M. said, “It was a Glock ... 9mm ...with clip ... I know handguns real well ... I know Glockes ... it was black.” After showing the handgun to G.M., Enriquez told him he wanted to go back and get the guy in the wheelchair. G.M. said Enriquez was carrying the handgun in his waistband.

Officer Morehead was armed with his Glock 37, .45 GAP semi-automatic service pistol. The weapon was being carried with 10 rounds in the magazine and one additional round in the chamber—a total of 11 rounds. The Denver Police Department Crime Laboratory personnel processed the weapon and magazines after the shooting and determined Officer Morehead fired 6 shots.

Officer Walsh was armed with his Glock 21, .45 caliber semi-automatic service

4 The weapon is manufactured by Crosman and is identified as the “Crosman Pro 77...semi-automatic CO₂ air pistol.”

5 See attached photos of the handgun and the manufacturer’s warning to purchasers. It is also significant to note that this weapon fires the projectile at a speed of 325 feet per second. This is greater than the length of a football field in one second. Although the weapon is not a “firearm”, as defined by Colorado law, it is capable of being a “deadly weapon” in the manner in which it is used. If fired at close range striking vulnerable areas of the body, such as the eyes, it is capable of causing serious bodily injury.

pistol. The weapon was being carried with 13 rounds in the magazine and one additional round in the chamber—a total of 14 rounds. The Denver Police Department Crime Laboratory personnel processed the weapon and magazines after the shooting and determined Officer Walsh fired 6 shots.

Enriquez's criminal history lists 15 aliases, 4 dates of birth, and 2 social security numbers. He was born in Mexico City, Mexico. Enriquez has numerous arrests dating back to 1993. His arrests include: Assault, Disturbing the peace, Disobeying a lawful order, Destruction of private property, Disturbing the peace, Assault, Shoplifting, Disturbing the peace, Fugitive hold for Arapahoe County, Driving Under Revocation, Destruction of private property, Disturbing the peace, Interference with Police Authority, Driving under restraint, Fugitive hold for Adams County on Forgery, Shoplifting, First degree criminal trespass of vehicle, False information, First degree criminal trespass of vehicle, Motor vehicle theft, Robbery, Fugitive hold for Adams County on First degree criminal trespass of vehicle & False information, Motor vehicle theft, Parole violation—released to Washington County. Various aliases were used by Enriquez in these arrests.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

Criminal liability is established in Colorado only if it is proved beyond a reasonable doubt that someone has committed all of the elements of an offense defined by Colorado statute, and it is proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the offense was committed without any statutorily-recognized justification or excuse. While knowingly or intentionally shooting another human being is generally prohibited as assault or homicide in Colorado, the Criminal Code specifies certain circumstances in which the use of physical force or deadly physical force by a peace officer is justified. As the evidence establishes that Enriquez was shot by Officers Morehead and Walsh, the determination of whether their conduct was criminal is primarily a question of legal justification.

C.R.S. 18-1-707 defines the circumstances under which a peace officer can use physical force and deadly physical force in Colorado. In pertinent part, the statute reads as follows:

- (1) Except as provided in subsection (2) of this section, a peace officer is justified in using reasonable and appropriate physical force upon another person when and to the extent that he reasonably believes it necessary:
 - (a) To effect an arrest or to prevent the escape from custody of an arrested person unless he knows that the arrest is unauthorized; or
 - (b) To defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of physical force while effecting or attempting to affect such an arrest or while preventing or attempting to prevent such an escape.

(2) A peace officer is justified in using deadly physical force upon another person ... only when he reasonably believes that it is necessary:

- (a) To defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of deadly physical force;
or
- (b) To effect the arrest or to prevent the escape from custody of a person whom he reasonably believes:
 - 1. Has committed or attempted to commit a felony involving the use or threatened use of a deadly weapon;
or
 - 2. Is attempting to escape by the use of a deadly weapon;
or
 - 3. Otherwise indicates, except through a motor vehicle violation, that he is likely to endanger human life or to inflict serious bodily injury to another unless apprehended without delay.

Section 18-1-901(2)(e) of the Colorado Revised Statutes defines the terms “Deadly weapon” and “Deadly physical force” as follows:

“Deadly Weapon” means any of the following which in the manner it is used or intended to be used is capable of producing death or serious bodily injury: (I) A firearm, whether loaded or unloaded; (II) A knife; (III) A bludgeon; or (IV) Any other weapon, device, instrument, material, or substance, whether animate or inanimate.

“Deadly physical force” as force the intended, natural, and probable consequences of which is to produce death, and which does, in fact, produce death.

Officers are entitled to rely on the doctrine of “apparent necessity” so long as the conditions and circumstances are such that a person would reasonably believe, erroneously or not, that action was necessary. See, People v. La Voie, 155 Colo. 551, 395 P.2d 1001 (1964), People v. Silva, 987 p.2d 909 (Colo. App. 1999). It is immaterial whether the suspect was actually trying to injure the officers or another, so long as a reasonable person, under like conditions and circumstances, would believe the appearances were sufficient to require the action taken.

It is fundamental that the law of self-defense, which is emphatically a law of necessity, involves the question of one’s right to act upon appearances, even though such appearances may prove to have been deceptive; also the question of whether the Danger is actual or only apparent, and as well the fact that Danger is not necessary, in order to justify one in acting in self-defense. Apparent necessity, if well grounded and of such a character as to appeal to a reasonable person, under like conditions and circumstances, as being sufficient to require action, justifies the application of the doctrine of self-defense to the same extent as actual or real necessity. Young v. People, 107 P.274, (Colo. 1910).

The test for justifiable self defense or defense of others requires that, given the totality of the circumstances, a person reasonably believed that he or another person was being subjected to the use or imminent use of unlawful physical force or deadly physical force and that he used a degree of force that he reasonably believed to be necessary to protect himself or another person.

Therefore, the question presented in this case is whether, at the instant Officers Morehead and Walsh fired the shots that caused Enriquez's death, they reasonably believed that Enriquez was directing or was about to direct deadly physical force against one or both of them. In order to establish criminal responsibility for an officer knowingly or intentionally causing the death to another, the state must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the officer doing the shooting either did not really believe in the existence of these requisite circumstances, or, if they did hold such belief, that belief was, in light of all available facts, unreasonable.

CONCLUSION

The intent of Officers Morehead and Walsh was to locate and contact the person described by the citizen witness as being armed with a handgun. The officers were successful in locating Enriquez. Prior to being contacted by the officers, Enriquez had already assaulted P.S., stolen the handgun from him, and brandished the handgun in the neighborhood. Enriquez's conduct throughout the contact with Officers Morehead and Walsh was non-compliant, aggressive and assaultive. He ignored all of their lawful commands and advanced on Officer Morehead while pulling a screwdriver from his pocket. The officers did not fire at that time and Enriquez tossed away the screwdriver. Enriquez's decision to then draw and point the handgun at the two armed police officers, caused the officers to justifiably shoot him.

The fact that the handgun turned out to be a Crosman 77—semi-automatic CO₂ air pistol, and not the more powerful "firearm" it resembled, is of no significance in finding the officers' conduct to be justifiable. It would be impossible for anyone to determine under the specific facts of this case that the handgun Enriquez was wielding was a less powerful weapon than the officers perceived.⁶ All other witnesses in this incident believed this was the actual "firearm" it resembled, including the individual who was with Enriquez at the time of the shooting.

There is no justification to attack a police officer who is performing his lawful duty. Officers have a right to defend themselves from a perceived imminent attack. Armed assailants should expect to be shot if they draw a handgun on an armed police officer under the circumstances of this case. Had Enriquez simply complied with the officers' lawful commands, the confrontation would have ended peacefully at that time.

Based on a review of the totality of facts developed in this investigation, we could not prove beyond a reasonable doubt that it was unreasonable for Officers Morehead and Walsh to fire the shots that caused Enriquez's death. Therefore, no criminal charges are fileable against either officer for his conduct in this incident. This is a justifiable homicide under the facts of this case and Colorado law.

The attached document entitled Officer-Involved Shooting Protocol 2010 is incorporated by this reference. The following pertinent statement is in that document: "In most officer-involved shootings the filing decision and release of the brief decision letter will occur within two to three weeks of the incident, unless circumstances of a case require more time. This more compressed time frame will allow the Denver Police Department administrative investigation to move forward more quickly." In accordance with the protocol, the administrative and tactical aspects of the event will be addressed by the Manager of Safety and Chief of Police in their review and administrative decision letter.

We will open our file for in-person review at our office 60 days from the date of this letter. The Denver Police Department is the custodian of records related to this case. As in every case we handle, any interested party may seek judicial review of our decision under C.R.S. 16-5-209.

Very truly yours,

OFFICER-INVOLVED SHOOTING PROTOCOL 2010

Mitchell R. Morrissey
Denver District Attorney

The Denver District Attorney is a State official and the Denver District Attorney's Office is a State agency. As such, although the funding for the operations of the Denver District Attorney's Office is provided by the City and County of Denver, the Office is independent of City government. The District Attorney is the chief law enforcement official of the Second Judicial District, the boundaries of which are the same as the City and County of Denver. By Colorado statutory mandate, the District Attorney is responsible for the prosecution of violations of Colorado criminal laws. Hence, the District Attorney has the authority and responsibility to make criminal charging decisions in peace officer involved shootings.

The Denver Police Department was created by the Charter of the City and County of Denver. Under the Charter, the police department is overseen by the Office of the Denver Manager of Safety. The Manager of Safety and the Chief of Police are appointed by and serve at the pleasure of the Mayor of Denver. The District Attorney has no administrative authority or control over the personnel of the Denver Police Department. That authority and control resides with City government.

When a peace officer shoots and wounds or kills a person in Denver, Colorado, a very specific protocol is followed to investigate and review the case. Officer-involved shootings are not just another case. Confrontations between Officer-Involved Shooting the police and citizens where physical force or deadly physical force is used are among the most important events with which we deal. They deserve special attention and handling at all levels. They have potential criminal, administrative, and civil consequences. They can also have a significant impact on the relationship between law enforcement officers and the community they serve. It is important that a formal protocol be in place in advance for handling these cases. The following will assist you in understanding the Denver protocol, the law, and other issues related to the investigation and review of officer-involved shootings.

For more than a quarter century, Denver has had the most open officer-involved shooting protocol in the country. The protocol is designed to insure that a professional, thorough, impartial, and verifiable investigation is conducted and that it can be independently confirmed by later review. The fact that the investigative file is open to the public for in-person review at the conclusion of the investigation and review process, permits not only formal legal reviews to occur, but also allows for any citizen to review the case. This, perhaps more than any other single factor, helps to insure that the best possible investigation is conducted by all involved parties.

When an officer-involved shooting occurs, it is immediately reported to the Denver police dispatcher, who then notifies all persons on the call-out list. This includes the Division Chief of Investigations, First Assistant District Attorney and Chief Deputy District Attorney, Division Chief of Patrol, Captain of Crimes Against Persons Bureau, Homicide Unit personnel, Director of the Crime Lab, Crime Lab Technicians, and others. These individuals respond first to the scene and then to DPD headquarters to take statements and conduct other follow-up investigation. The Denver District Attorney, Manager of Safety, and Chief of Police are notified of the shooting and may respond.

The criminal investigation is conducted under a specific investigative protocol with direct participation of Denver Police Department and Denver District Attorney personnel. The primary investigative personnel are assigned to the Homicide Unit where the best resources reside for this type of investigation. The scope of the investigation is broad and the focus is on all involved parties. This includes the conduct of the involved officer(s) and the conduct of the person who is shot. Standard investigative procedures are used at all stages of the investigation, and there are additional specific procedures in the Denver Police Department's Operations Manual for officer-involved shootings to further insure the integrity of the investigation. For example, the protocol requires the immediate separation and sequestration of all key witnesses and all involved officers. Involved officers are separated at the scene, transported separately by a supervisor to police headquarters, and sequestered with restricted visitation until a formal voluntary statement is taken. Generally the officers speak with their attorney prior to making their voluntary statement. A log is kept to document who has contact with the officer. This is done to insure totally independent statements and to avoid even the appearance of collusion.

In most cases, the bulk of the criminal phase of the investigation is concluded in the first twelve to twenty-four hours. Among other investigative activities, this includes a thorough processing of the crime scene; a neighborhood canvass to identify all possible witnesses; the taking of written statements from all witnesses, and video-taped statements from all key witnesses and the involved officer(s). The involved officer(s), like any citizen, have a Constitutional Fifth Amendment right not to make a statement. In spite of this fact, Denver officers have given voluntary sworn statements in every case, without exception, since 1979. Since November of 1983, when the videotape-interview room was first used, each of these statements has been recorded on videotape. No other major city police department in the nation can make this statement.

Officers are trained to properly secure their firearm after an officer-involved shooting. The protocol provides for the firearm to be taken from the officer by crime lab personnel for appropriate testing. The officer is provided a replacement weapon to use pending the completion of the testing. The protocol also allows for any officer to voluntarily submit to intoxicant testing if they chose. The most common circumstance under which an officer might elect to do so would be in a shooting while working at an establishment that serves alcohol beverages. Compelled intoxicant testing can be conducted if there are indications of possible intoxication and legal standards are met.

The Denver Chief of Police and Denver District Attorney commit significant resources to the investigation and review process in an effort to complete the investigation as quickly as practicable. There are certain aspects of the investigation that take more time to complete. For example, the testing of physical evidence by the crime lab—firearm examination, handgunshot residue or pattern testing, blood analyses, and other testing commonly associated with these cases. In addition, where a death occurs, the autopsy and autopsy report take more time and this can be extended substantially if it is necessary to send lab work out for very specialized toxicology or other testing. In addition to conducting the investigation, the entire investigation must be thoroughly and accurately documented.

Officer-involved shooting cases are handled by the District Attorney, First Assistant District Attorney, and Chief Deputies District Attorney specifically trained for these cases. At least two of these district attorneys respond to each officer-involved shooting. They are notified at the same time as others on the officer-involved shooting call-out list and respond to the scene of the shooting and then to police headquarters to participate in taking statements. They are directly involved in providing legal advice to the investigators and in taking video-taped statements from citizens and officer witnesses, and from the involved officer(s). They continue to be involved throughout the follow-up investigation.

The Denver District Attorney is immediately informed when an officer-involved shooting occurs, and if he does not directly participate, his involved personnel advise him throughout the investigative process. It is not unusual for the District Attorney to personally respond and participate in the investigation. At the conclusion of the criminal investigation the District Attorney personally makes the filing decision.

If criminal charges are not filed, a brief decision letter describing the shooting is sent to the Chief of Police by the District Attorney, with copies to the involved officer(s), the Mayor, City Council members, other appropriate persons, and the media. The letter is intentionally brief to avoid in any way impacting the integrity and validity of the Denver Police Department administrative investigation and review, which follows the criminal investigation and review. This represents a 2005 change from the very thorough decision letters that have previously been written by the District Attorney in these cases.

This change has been made because the Denver Manager of Safety now writes an exhaustive letter at the conclusion of the administrative review of the shooting. The Manager of Safety's letter can include additional facts, if any, developed during the administrative investigation. Therefore, the Manager of Safety's letter can provide the most comprehensive account of the shooting. In contrast to the criminal investigation phase, the administrative process addresses different issues, is controlled by less stringent rules and legal levels of proof, and can include the use of investigative techniques that are not permissible in a criminal investigation. For example, the department can, under administrative rules, order officers to make statements. This is not permissible during the criminal investigation phase and evidence generated from such a statement would not be admissible in a criminal prosecution.

The Manager of Safety has taken a more active role in officer-involved shooting cases and has put in place a more thorough administrative process for investigating, reviewing, and responding to these cases. The critical importance of the administrative review has been discussed in our decision letters and enclosures for many years.⁷ As a result of the positive changes the Manager of Safety has now instituted and his personal involvement in the process, we will not open the criminal investigative file at the time our brief decision letter is released. Again, we are doing this to avoid in any way impacting the integrity and validity of the Manager of Safety and Denver Police Department ongoing administrative investigation and review. After the Manager of Safety has released his letter, we will make our file open for in-person review at our office by any person, if the City fails to open its criminal-case file for in-person review. The District Attorney copy of the criminal-case file will not, of course, contain any of the information developed during the administrative process. The City is the Official Custodian of Records of the original criminal-case file and administrative-case file, not the Denver District Attorney.

THE DECISION

By operation of law, the Denver District Attorney is responsible for making the criminal filing decision in all officer-involved shootings in Denver. In most officer-involved shootings the filing decision and release of the brief decision letter will occur within two-to-three weeks of the incident, unless circumstances of a case require more time. This more compressed time frame will allow the Denver Police Department administrative investigation to move forward more quickly.

The same standard that is used in all criminal cases in Denver is applied to the review of officer-involved shootings. The filing decision analysis involves reviewing the totality of the facts developed in the criminal investigation and applying the pertinent Colorado law to those facts. The facts and the law are then analyzed in relation to the criminal case filing standard. For criminal charges to be filed, the District Attorney must find that there is a reasonable likelihood that all of the elements of the crime charged can be proven beyond a reasonable doubt, unanimously, to twelve jurors, at trial, after considering reasonable defenses. If this standard is met, criminal charges will be filed.

⁷ See the "Conclusion" statement in the "Decision Letter" in the December 31, 1997, shooting of Antonio Reyes-Rojas, where we first pointed out issues related to the importance of the Administrative review of officer-involved shootings. Subsequent letters continued to address this issue.

One exception to the Denver District Attorney making the filing decision is if it is necessary to use the Denver Statutory Grand Jury. The District Attorney will consider it appropriate to refer the investigation to a grand jury when it is necessary for the successful completion of the investigation. It may be necessary in order to acquire access to essential witnesses or tangible evidence through the grand jury's subpoena power, or to take testimony from witnesses who will not voluntarily cooperate with investigators or who claim a privilege against self-incrimination, but whom the district attorney is willing to immunize from prosecution on the basis of their testimony. The grand jury could also be used if the investigation produced significant conflicts in the statements and evidence that could best be resolved by grand jurors. If the grand jury is used, the grand jury could issue an indictment charging the officer(s) criminally. To do so, at least nine of the twelve grand jurors must find probable cause that the Fresquez committed the charged crime. In order to return a "no true bill," at least nine grand jurors must vote that the probable cause proof standard has not been met. In Colorado, the grand jury can now issue a report of their findings when they return a no true bill or do not reach a decision—do not have nine votes either way. The report of the grand jury is a public document.

A second exception to the Denver District Attorney making the filing decision is when it is necessary to have a special prosecutor appointed. The most common situation is where a conflict of interest or the appearance of impropriety is present. As an example, if an officer involved in the shooting is related to an employee of the Denver District Attorney's Office, or an employee of the Denver District Attorney's Office is involved in the shooting. Under these circumstances, there would exist at a minimum an appearance of impropriety if the Denver District Attorney's Office handled the case.

THE COLORADO LAW

Criminal liability is established in Colorado only if it is proved beyond a reasonable doubt that someone has committed all of the elements of an offense defined by Colorado statute, and it is proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the offense was committed without any statutorily-recognized justification or excuse. While knowingly or intentionally shooting and causing injury or death to another human being is generally prohibited as assault or murder in Colorado, the Criminal Code specifies certain circumstances in which the use of physical force or deadly physical force is justified. As there is generally no dispute that the officer intended to shoot at the person who is wounded or killed, the determination of whether the conduct was criminal is primarily a question of legal justification.

Section 18-1-707 of the Colorado Revised Statutes provides that while effecting or attempting to effect an arrest, a peace officer is justified in using deadly physical force upon another person . . . when he reasonably believes that it is necessary to defend himself or a third person from what he reasonably believes to be the use or imminent use of deadly physical force. Therefore, the question presented in most officer-involved shooting cases is whether, at the instant the officer fired the shot that wounded or killed the person, the officer reasonably believed, and in fact believed, that he or another person, was in imminent Danger of great bodily injury or death from the actions of the person who is shot. In order to establish criminal responsibility for knowingly or intentionally shooting another, the state must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the person doing the shooting either did not really believe he or another was in imminent danger, or, if he did hold such belief, that belief was, in light of the circumstances, unreasonable.

The statute also provides that a peace officer is justified in using deadly physical force upon another person . . . when he reasonably believes that it is necessary to effect an arrest . . . of a person whom he reasonably believes has committed or attempted to commit a felony involving the use or threatened use of a deadly weapon; or is attempting to escape by the use of a deadly weapon; or otherwise indicates, except through motor-vehicle violation, that he is likely to endanger human life or to inflict serious bodily injury to another unless apprehended without delay.

In Colorado, deadly physical force means force the intended, natural, or probable consequence of which is to produce death and which does in fact produce death. Therefore, if the person shot does not die, by definition, only physical force has been used under Colorado law.

GENERAL COMMENTS

The following statement concerns issues that are pertinent to all officer-involved shootings.

The great majority of officer-involved shootings in Denver, and throughout the country, ultimately result from what is commonly called the split-second decision to shoot. It is often the culmination of a string of decisions by the officer and the citizen that ultimately creates the need for a split-second decision to shoot. The split-second decision is generally made to stop a real or perceived threat or aggressive behavior by the citizen. It is this split-second time frame which typically defines the focus of the criminal-review decision, not the string of decisions along the way that placed the participants in the life-or-death final frame.

When a police-citizen encounter reaches this split-second window, and the citizen is armed with a deadly weapon, the circumstances generally make the shooting justified, or at the least, difficult to prove criminal responsibility under the criminal laws and required legal levels of proof that apply. The fact that no criminal charges are fileable in a given case is not necessarily synonymous with an affirmative finding of justification, or a belief that the matter was in all respects handled appropriately from an administrative viewpoint. It is simply a determination that there is not a reasonable likelihood of proving criminal charges beyond a reasonable doubt, unanimously, to a jury. This is the limit of the District Attorney's statutory authority in these matters. For these reasons, the fact that a shooting may be "controversial" does not mean it has a criminal remedy. The fact that the District Attorney may feel the shooting was avoidable or "does not like" aspects of the shooting, does not make it criminal. In these circumstances, remedies, if any are appropriate, may be in the administrative or civil arenas. The District Attorney has no administrative or civil authority in these matters. Those remedies are primarily the purview of the City government, the Denver Police Department, and private civil attorneys.

Research related to officer-involved shootings indicates that criminal charges are filed in approximately one in five hundred (1-in-500) shootings. And, jury convictions are rare in the filed cases. In the context of officer-involved shootings in Denver (approximately 8 per year), this ratio (1-in-500) would result in one criminal filing in 60 years. With District Attorneys now limited to two 4-year terms, this statistic would mean there would be one criminal filing during the combined terms of 8 or more District Attorneys.

In Denver, there have been three criminal filings in officer-involved shootings in the past 40 years, spanning seven District Attorneys. Two of the Denver officer-involved shootings were the result of on-duty, work related shootings. One case was in the 1970s and the other in the 1990s. Both of these shootings were fatal. The cases resulted in grand jury indictments. The officers were tried and found not guilty by Denver juries. The third criminal filing involved an off-duty, not in uniform shooting in the early 1980s in which one person was wounded. The officer was intoxicated at the time of the shooting. The officer pled guilty to felony assault. This case is mentioned here, but it was not in the line of duty and had no relationship to police work. In 2004, an officer-involved shooting was presented by the District Attorney to the Denver Statutory Grand Jury. The Grand Jury did not indict. A brief report was issued by the Grand Jury.

Based on the officer-involved shooting national statistics, there is a very high likelihood that individual District Attorneys across the country will not file criminal charges in an officer-involved shooting during their entire tenure. It is not unusual for this to occur. In Denver, only two of the past seven District Attorneys have done so. This, in fact, is statistically more filings than would be expected. There are many factors that combine to cause criminal prosecutions to be rare in officer-involved shootings and convictions to be even rarer. Ultimately, each shooting must be judged based on its unique facts, the applicable law, and the case filing standard.

The American Bar Association's Prosecution Standards state in pertinent part: "A prosecutor should not institute, cause to be instituted, or permit the continued pendency of criminal charges in the absence of sufficient admissible evidence to support a conviction. In making the decision to prosecute, the prosecutor should give no weight to the personal or political advantages or disadvantages which might be involved or to a desire to enhance his or her record of convictions. Among the factors the prosecutor may properly consider in exercising his or her discretion is the prosecutor's reasonable doubt that the accused is in fact guilty.” The National District Attorneys Association’s National Prosecution Standards states in pertinent part: “The prosecutor should file only those charges which he reasonably believes can be substantiated by admissible evidence at trial. The prosecutor should not attempt to utilize the charging decision only as a leverage device in obtaining guilty pleas to lesser charges.” The standards also indicate that “factors which should not be considered in the charging decision include the prosecutor’s rate of conviction; personal advantages which prosecution may bring to the prosecutor; political advantages which prosecution may bring to the prosecutor; factors of the accused legally recognized to be deemed invidious discrimination insofar as those factors are not pertinent to the elements of the crime.”

Because of the difference between the criminal, administrative, and civil standards, the same facts can fairly and appropriately lead to a different analysis and different results in these three uniquely different arenas. While criminal charges may not be fileable in a case, administrative action may be very appropriate. The legal levels of proof and rules of evidence that apply in the criminal-law arena are imprecise tools for examining and responding to the broader range of issues presented by officer-involved shootings. Issues related to the tactical and strategic decisions made by the officer leading up to the split-second decision to shoot are most effectively addressed by the Denver Police Department through the Use of Force Review Board and the Tactics Review Board process and administrative review of the shooting.

The administrative-review process, which is controlled by less stringent legal levels of proof and rules than the criminal-review process, provides both positive remedial options and punitive sanctions. This process also provides significantly broader latitude in accessing and using information concerning the background, history, and job performance of the involved officer. This type of information may have limited or no applicability to the criminal review, but may be very important in making administrative decisions. This could include information concerning prior officer-involved shootings, firearm discharges, use of non-lethal force, and other conduct, both positive and negative.

The Denver Police Department’s administrative review of officer-involved shootings improves police training and performance, helps protect citizens and officers, and builds public confidence in the department. Where better approaches are identified, administrative action may be the only way to effect remedial change. The administrative review process provides the greatest opportunity to bring officer conduct in compliance with the expectations of the department and the community it serves. Clearly, the department and the community expect more of their officers than that they simply conduct themselves in a manner that avoids criminal prosecution.

There are a variety of actions that can be taken administratively in response to the department’s review of the shooting. The review may reveal that no action is required. Frankly, this is the case in most officer-involved shootings. However, the department may determine that additional training is appropriate for all officers on the force, or only for the involved officer(s). The review may reveal the need for changes in departmental policies, procedures or rules. In some instances, the review may indicate the need for changing the assignment of the involved officer, temporarily or permanently. Depending on the circumstances, this could be done for the benefit of the officer, the community or both. And, where departmental rules are violated, formal discipline may be appropriate. The department’s police training and standards expertise makes it best suited to make these decisions.

The Denver Police Department’s Use of Force Review Board and the Tactics Review Board’s after-incident, objective analysis of the tactical and strategic string of decisions made by the officer that lead to the necessity to make the split-second decision to shoot is an important review process. It is clearly not always possible to do so because of the conduct of the suspect, but to the extent through appropriate tactical and strategic decisions officers can de-escalate, rather than intensify these encounters, the need for split-second decisions will be reduced. Once the split-second decision time frame is reached, the risk of a shooting is high.

It is clear not every officer will handle similar situations in similar ways. This is to be expected. Some officers will be better than others at defusing potentially-violent encounters. This is also to be expected. To the degree officers possess skills that enhance their ability to protect themselves and our citizens, while averting unnecessary shootings, Denver will continue to have a minimal number of officer-involved shootings. Denver officers face life-threatening confrontations hundreds of times every year. Nevertheless, over the last 20 years officer-involved shootings have averaged less than eight annually in Denver. These numbers are sharply down from the 1970s and early 1980s when there were 12-to-14 shootings each year.

Skill in the use of tactics short of deadly force is an important ingredient in keeping officer-involved shootings to a minimum. Training Denver officers receive in guiding them in making judgments about the best tactics to use in various situations, beyond just possessing good firearms proficiency, is one of the key ingredients in minimizing unnecessary and preventable shootings. Denver police officers handle well over a million calls for service each year and unfortunately in responding to these calls they face hundreds of life-threatening encounters in the process. In the overwhelming majority of these situations, they successfully resolve the matter without injury to anyone. Clearly, not all potentially-violent confrontations with citizens can be de-escalated, but officers do have the ability to impact the direction and outcome of many of the situations they handle, based on the critical decisions they make leading up to the deadly-force decision. It should be a part of the review of every officer-involved shooting, not just to look for what may have been done differently, but also to see what occurred that was appropriate, with the ultimate goal of improving police response.

RELEASE OF INFORMATION

Officer-involved shootings are matters of significant and legitimate public concern. Every effort must be made to complete the investigation and make the decision as quickly as practicable. The Denver Protocol has been designed to be as open as legal and ethical standards will permit and to avoid negatively impacting the criminal, administrative, or civil procedures. "Fair Trial—Free Press" standards and "The Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct" limit the information that can be released prior to the conclusion of the investigation.

Officer-involved shooting cases always present the difficult issue of balancing the rights of the involved parties and the integrity of the investigation with the public's right to know and the media's need to report the news. The criminal investigation and administrative investigation that follows can never keep pace with the speed of media reporting. This creates an inherent and unavoidable dilemma. Because we are severely restricted in releasing facts before the investigation is concluded, there is the risk that information will come from sources who may provide inaccurate accounts, speculative theories, misinformation or disinformation that is disseminated to the public while the investigation is progressing. This is an unfortunate byproduct of these conflicted responsibilities. This can cause irreparable damage to individual and agency reputations.

It is our desire to have the public know the full and true facts of these cases at the earliest opportunity, but we are required by law, ethics, and the need to insure the integrity of the investigation to only do so at the appropriate time.

CONCLUSION

The protocol that is used in Denver to investigate and review officer-involved shootings was reviewed and strengthened by the Erickson Commission in 1997, under the leadership of William Erickson, former Chief Justice of the Colorado Supreme Court. The report released after the 15-month-long Erickson Commission review found it to be one of the best systems in the country for handling officer-involved shootings. We recognize there is no "perfect" method for handling officer-involved shooting cases. We continue to evaluate the protocol and seek ways to strengthen it.
