MAN SENTENCED IN DENVER SHOOTING

A man accused of shooting his girlfriend in the face last Christmas Eve has been sentenced today to 48 years in prison.

Thomas McBride (DOB: 01-01-56) was given the maximum sentence of 48 years in prison for attempted first-degree murder and 32 years in prison for first-degree assault with a deadly weapon, with the sentences to run concurrently.

The victim, her mother and daughter all spoke to the Court, sharing how difficult life has been since the shooting. Denver Deputy DA David Lamb asked for the maximum due to the trauma the victim continues to endure. In speaking to the Court, McBride told the judge the shooting was an accident. Denver District Court Judge Christina Habas noted that the jury that convicted McBride did not believe it was an accident, nor did she, before sentencing him to the maximum possible sentence.
