MATH TUTOR SENTENCED IN '95 SEXUAL ASSAULT CASE

A 77-year-old math tutor accused of sexually assaulting one of his 12-year-old students in 1995 has been sentenced to a two-year deferred judgment and probation.

Under the guilty plea agreement, Alexander Naroditsky, (dob: 07-25-29) is ordered to register as a sex offender, have no further contact with children, and must quit tutoring. The judge granted an exception allowing Naroditsky to see his grandchildren.

Naroditsky pleaded guilty earlier to unlawful sexual contact, a misdemeanor. The guilty plea agreement was reached after an August 2006 trial ended in a hung jury.

His involvement in the 1995 case alleges that he repeatedly fondled one of his female students during tutoring sessions. The allegations arose in 2005 after the victim saw a program about adults who have survived sexual assault.
